Introduction

This book is a compilation of my scripts with the Silent Sleen Panther Lair, from returning to the Lair all the way through ranking up and learning certain things. You might think it odd that a man can roleplay a Panther girl, and a few years ago I would agree with you. However, after seeing one room roleplay both gender benders AND secondary characters effectively I decided to try my own hand at it after seeing the following rules on the Silent Sleen entry page:

“-At this time, we will be allowing Secondary Characters for people outside the Lair, and those that are members. However, all Secondaries MUST be listed on the forums. Simply fill out the form in the Secondary Character area. If you are from another home, you must have a script from someone in authority in your home, or your owner (as applicable) included with that form.

-In regards to “gender benders”, I don’t particularly care what you have between your legs. I do ask that you respect the players enough to disclose to the if you are going to have sexual relations.

That is all. ”

If after reading this you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me at rickbulow74@live.com and I will be happy to try to answer any questions you might have.

I have my short bow on my back along with a quiver of 20 simple pile arrows. doelike green eyes looking about as I move my 5'3", 120 pound body slowly through the Forest, ducking behind a tree cautiously looking about as I do ever aware of my surroundings* says to Renata Outlaw Silent Sle: The spear would be dismantled, with the explanation "too long. You can keep the spear head though." Your quiver would be emptied, each arrow studied and then put back, and Rina snickered at the huge knife but put it with the keep pile as well. All these things would be loaded with the other girls' belongings, and taken in a cart pulled by a thrall. Finally, you would all get sacks put over your heads, and have your right hand guided to the shoulder of the girl before you. Then, you'd be led around.

Rina would have you all circle and zigzag this way and that, and finally you'd begin pushing through thick, dense foliage. But then, there would be the quiet hum of voices and movement. You'd reached the camp.

Your first glimpse showed a total of 60 tents, and some few hundred women and men at a glance. Even this late, the camp was bustling. Rina would head up to a tall blonde woman and then you'd all be told to line up side by side.

I then feel the sack being removed from my head and I look at the tents and the women and men moving about them. I stand side by each with the women I was with as the red* says to Shayne DietrichPanther G: I would venture to say that the best wood for making a bow would be kalana wood as it is supple. The process for making a short bow would be the same as that of a longbow but just a little shorter. That being take and bend the kalana wood slightly and place a notched bosk horn at each end, then use hemp wrapped with silk to loosely string it.

says to Shayne DietrichPanther G: As far as the silk is concerned, we could go in disguise to one of the cities and trade for it as we post messages on the public boards. To join this band is to leave behind civilization for good. We have everything we require here.. and while we might sometimes trade for those very few things that we can't get out here, we don't go to cities for them. In fact. such things are forbidden in this band, save those few that are VERY adept at such things. That is an earned thing, and a VERY risky thing. For example.. how would you disguise yourself, just out of curiosity. ?

I wrote things down as I spoke, nodding to your words.

says to Shayne DietrichPanther G: hearing your words and then nodding once As far as disguising myself, I would utilize either the clothing of a aptured FFW that had made her way to the Exchange Point. Either that or find a repcloth sack or cloak. I know it might be risky, but how else are we to post messages to a public bosrd? If memory serves me, there was an incident of a Panther Girl in disguise who had posted a message to the Ubar of Ar on the public board in Laura.

I place that in my right hand as I pick up the shortbow I made as well as a quiver of about 20 simple pile headed arrows. I chose these arrows because they are the easiest to extract from the victim whether animal or human. Placing the quiver on my right shoulder and the bow in my left hand, I make my way back to the Scout and let her know I am ready. She nods and motions another Scout over. They blindfold me and one of them takes my spear in her hand as I am led out of the Camp and we walk about in circles and a zigzag motion for about an ahn before they remove the blindfold from me. says to ALL: seeing the Forest silent as silent can be I make my way through the deep forest and back to the trail. Then using the spear as a walking stick I make my way back to where the Scouts are, making the sound of the gim. They respond in kind and then approach me. I hand off my spear and report nothing of note. They nod and blindfold me for the trip back to the Camp

Keeping my sleen knife on my hip I make my way about the Camp, checking a couple of things out here and there*

says to Renata Outlaw Silent Sle: I smiled at your first command. You'd not know it, but there was a separate team dedicated just to that thing, but it was noted nonetheless, since you were in essence on test basis here and all. As for me, I kept to your left flank, back off to your side with only 10 feet between us. I was armed with a small buckler that covered my back, along with a quiver of arrows and a short bow. The quiver rested one way, the bow the other, making an "x" over my back. I had 30 barbed arrows. It was a thing of interest, since normally I didn't carry them. It might make you wonder just what I expected to face in here. I held my spear in my hands, lightly gripping it, the blade pointed out to my left. I moved carefully, stepping on hard surfaces so as to minimize the amount of tracks I'd even leave. Rina and Nyada were equipped the same way, and moved similarly. We entered the dense foliage, moving as silently as possible. Mine and Rina's eyes were on the trees the most, and you could feel nervousness radiating off the large red haired Torvie woman. - says to ALL: Everyone would eventually be in file here. This had been our destination, and we had been SO close.. I had chosen this underground lair that we used during really bad winters and the like years ago, mostly because it was warm and impossible to find if you didn't know the way. After awhile, there would be torches at least in the walls, kept tended by a group of panthers that stayed here year round. Where we had started with 300 people, we now had dwindled to 150.. The others would follow once the bodies were tended. Thus began our spiraling descent into the gorean underground.

Is in or near a network of caves and foothills within the Territory.

says to ALL: downdowndown we'd go. Then, after about an ahn of walking, the tunnels would widen abruptly. There would then be something amazing, and it was a huge open cavern with grass and trees. The top opened to the goorean skies, which were some thousands of feet up by now. I wasn't sure why, but the Kurii had never descended on us from up there. At any rate, tents were everywhere here, the huts having been taken out the last time we moved. There was a waterfall at the back, and a stream that ran a crescent perimeter of the area, and disappeared into the rocks. There were many caverns off this main one, that served as supply areas, and still had huts within them. A dais of sorts was in the center of the camp, and it was to here that I went, and simply slumped into the chair that appeared carved from a tree that had once stood here. It had been struck by lightning, and broken. there was a whole story to that, but now was not the time for such. I threw my spear down, and silence descended on the lair as people just watched me. I said nothing for a long while.

I then set my mouth in a thin line before speaking.

"If you forget one of my commands again, Balen, I shall sell you. If that comes to pass I shall also restripe you. I will not tolerate laziness or inattentiveness. Especially when all you had to do was look at a list. Am I clear? " -I brought down the kurt without warning, all five blades spreading out over your shoulders with a loud THWACK as I spoke. Then I'd swing the thing in a crisscross pat-

says to Renata Outlaw Silent Sle: I smiled at your first command. You'd not know it, but there was a separate team dedicated just to that thing, but it was noted nonetheless, since you were in essence on test basis here and all. As for me, I kept to your left flank, back off to your side with only 10 feet between us. I was armed with a small buckler that covered my back, along with a quiver of arrows and a short bow. The quiver rested one way, the bow the other, making an "x" over my back. I had 30 barbed arrows. It was a thing of interest, since normally I didn't carry them. It might make you wonder just what I expected to face in here. I held my spear in my hands, lightly gripping it, the blade pointed out to my left. I moved carefully, stepping on hard surfaces so as to minimize the amount of tracks I'd even leave. Rina and Nyada were equipped the same way, and moved similarly. We entered the dense foliage, moving as silently as possible. Mine and Rina's eyes were on the trees the most, and you could feel nervousness radiating off the large red haired Torvie woman. -

As I see the corpses burning I bring the weapons to the one in charge of supplies and hand them to her, thinking other panthers in the future might have need of them. I then move back and glance to the trees for the surviving scouts, knowing there might be a new schedule to replace those who were killed this night*

you didn't know the way. After awhile, there would be torches at least in the walls, kept tended by a group of panthers that stayed here year round. Where we had started with 300 people, we now had dwindled to 150.. The others would follow once the bodies were tended. Thus began our spiraling descent into the golean underground.

The top opened to the goorean skies, which were some thousands of feet up by now. I wasn't sure why, but the Kurii had never descended on us from up there. At any rate, tents were everywhere here, the huts having bene taken out the last time we moved. There was a waterfall at the back, and a stream that ran a crescent perimeter of the area, and disappeared into the rocks. There were many caverns off this main one, that served as supply areas, and still had huts within them. A dais of sorts was in the center of the camp, and it was to here that I went, and simply slumped into the chair that appeared carved from a tree that had once stood here. It had been struck by lightning, and broken. there was a whole story to that, but now was not the time for such. I threw my spear down, and silence descended on the lair as people just watched me. I said nothing for a long while.

But even so I still trusted none of them, I found it easier when it was just me. I sat for a while before I rose to et the large tarsk My spear was laid on the ground in front of the fire for now my left hand grabbed two vines and I dragged the tarsk back to the fire , Sitting back down I began to untie the vines allowing the giant leaves to fall to the ground as I unwrapped the beast.

I then move into the clearing and speak, unknown if she put the rock down prior to moving for the beast or if she still has it in her hand*

AYLEE: Tal Woman. What brings you to the territory of the Silent Sleen? my 5'3" frame standing about 20 feet from you, spear held in an underhand jab motion but keeping it nonthreatening for now Do not think about picking up your spear as you are surrounded. nodding to the other scouts in the trees who would have their arrows trained on you when I first spoke

"I am Aylee, I was simply exploring the forest I mean you or any other no harm" I paused for a moment my head turning to look at you. "I am not stupid enough to offend you by calming my spear. As soon as my eyes managed to fully open I sat up letting a small stretch climb up the spine of by back a yawn soon following. I had noticed that my spear was not at my side, I was not worried though, that spear head was ancient and rusted, who knows how long Sarah had had it before she had given it to me, I think the spear head saw it's end with the tarsk. 5' spear

I'd close the distance to 10' and faced you in an open stance, knees slightly bent 2" down. I held my spear laterally before me in a mid guard position at waist level. The tip was pointed off to my left. I rose up onto the balls of my feet and returned the nod, awaiting your attack with a grin.

I grin back noting the distance was shorter. I slowly go into a jog, shifting my hands as I do on the spear holding it about halfway from the spearhead. I then approach to within 2 feet of you and about a foot off to your right,* lowering the spear in a stab motion and jamming the butt end down toward your right foot. The intent? to cause you to drop your spear at most and cause you to have a nasty limp at worst.

says to Renata Outlaw Silent Sle: (sorry had a phone call)I watched your approach, and then seeing your spear jutting downward for my right ankle, I would not lower my guard, but instead, I'd simply shuffle to my left quickly, moving 2' over, to leave your spear butt hitting the ground. I'd leave my right foot forward coming out of that shuffle, and pivoted to face you, with a full 4' between us now. I'd lean into that right lead with a grin

I then swung my spear upwards, angling to a 45 degree angle, bringing the butt end up. I'd feint with that end, like I was going to hit you in the gut, but then I spun the spear in my hands quickly, and aimed the tip towards your right side in a slash, hoping to open you up early on in this. It would be a shallow slash, so it would only nick and not cause any heavy damage.

I'd keep our spears against one another for the moment and push down in an attempt to keep you from gaining your feet entirely.

While I pressed down, I'd bring my right leading foot forward, aiming a kick for the center of your ribs while you were half crouched there in front of me. I'd use that kick's momentum to push off you and shuffle back to open the distance to 3' between us, hoping that between the sudden loss of force against you combined with the kick would leave you prone in the sand.

-May come and go sans blindfold/hood. However, will still be watched by the scouts. You may NPC these Scouts if none are available. Any attempts to try to shake them off, or forgetting them in your posts will be taken as an assumption you are not trustworthy. In the case of this, you will either be demoted to Outlaw again, or killed depending on the severity and frequency of this infraction.

-You must hunt your own food, and will only be taken out once a hand to do so. Sometimes, we don't always get to eat well, so you must begin to learn that.

-May trade unsupervised in the LEP, but still place all scripts on the boards, so we know what was acquired.

-May capture slaves freely.

-Will no longer be subject to weapon inspection. However, you still must use weapons from the approved list.

says to Renata Huntress Silent S: The Lair is situated to the far north eastern corner of the Forest. It is butted up against the mountains that separate us from Torvaldsland. There are a few ways into the camp. The main way is from the South, through a complex network of caves that are littered with traps and dead ends. Coming from the west, there is a long tunnel that has been dug out over the years and maintained with wooden braces. It lets out of a hollowed out tree, and is a handy escape route if we are overrun. There is no eastern exit, since we are about as east as you can be. To the north, there are more caves that would carry us out into Torvaldsland itself. There are other emergency exits, but you won't learn of those till you are of Panther rank.

As for the Lair itself, it is a huge cavern some 200 feet down underground. The top has the appearance of being wide open, but there is tarn wire and mesh. It will sometimes rain a bit into the lair, but there are trees and rock ledges that prevent it from being a down-pour. At the heart of the Lair is a lake fed by a watefall. There is a dais in front of this lake, and is held by the Leader and her chain of command. There are huts scattered around this main area, and well as tents and treehouses. There are many tunnels that come off this central area, that lead to storage alcoves. There is a kitchen, a medical area, and a lot of storage areas.

We have enough stuff here to sustain us for a month of siege time. We have several springals that we salvaged from ships in the artic basin behind the waterfalls. They bolted down to the ground.. and then of course we have our scouts, archers, and sleen patrollers. So that is the bulk of defenses for the cave.. now the forest beyond.. ” I pulled that map off, and rolled it, and then revealed another.

Next I picked up three pieces of hemp making sure they was slightly longer than the bow I made a loop then begin to braid the three pieces together twisting and weaving the hemp together evenly as I could maintaining the tightness all the way through the braid. Once the braid was finished I made another loop at the end on the hemp and rose to my feet mimicking what you was doing, I hooked one end of the braided hemp over the bow's notch. I had hoped the spear would draw the occupants out of the tents and into the open to inspect what had invaded their camp allowing me to assess what exactly I was dealing with here. I waited for several heartbeats but oddly I heard nothing, suddenly I cursed at myself, realising that I now had to get my damned spear back I was just about to step out again from behind the thick tree base when I smelled something familiar Blood I saw another tree, just off to my right... closer to the camp and I did a ninja roll to get from this tree to that tree. I had a better viewpoint from here and that was when I noticed the side of one of the tents was smeared in blood And a lot of it. I took the bow from my right shoulder and pulled an arrow from the quiver readying it and aiming out in front of me as I risked stepping closer and I noticed more blood by the opening of another tent I suddenly became aware that this camp was a sight of chaos, supplies seemed to be the, but there was blood and body parts every where... someone ... or something had slaughtered this camp and torn it apart... but what ... and more importantly... was it still here?

A slight groan could be heard from one of the blood covered tents and slowly I made my way towards it. Motioning to you to follow me in I opened the tent with caution one foot stepping inside I noticed there on the floor a large gruff looking man laid on a fur, his stomach covered in blood and his own guts protruding from his flesh his hand clenching out as he tried reaching for his sword. says to Renata Huntress Silent S: Eyes widened In delight as I entered the tent It seemed like this one was where they had been keeping most of their supplies. The tent was filled with various weapons and food supplies a lot of which the Band could make use of. In the corner of the tent I spotted a couple of large empty carry packs and satchels Begin filling those packs and satchels with useful stuff. Do not pack anything we do not need.” My voice was firm yet still quiet then I turned and poked my head out of the tent Waving you over into the tent for you to see the contents.

says to Renata Huntress Silent S: Nodding to you about the traders I turned and began rummaging through some of the supplies tosses the crap ones aside and handing some other stuff off to the scout. "I do, My father taught me when I was a child I carefully moved one of the shields of to a side as I spoke, hidden behind the shield was a set of four short bows, all four were smoothly crafted and around 4 feet in length. The 6inch grip on each bow had been wrapped in leather the wood itself tapering out either side of the grip into a hook like end, the wood seemed to have been treated in something as it was like silk to the touch. The bows string was strong and sturdy. The perfectly crafted bows was a beautiful sight. I turned back to you then and tossed one your way. "These We will take" I said with a cheeky smile My eyes dropped down to the floor as my foot kicked something, to my surprise there on the floor under where the shield had been, sat four matching quivers each filled with 20 arrows. The quivers and arrows had been crafted to match the bows, once more I looked to you handing you one of the quivers I had keep hold of a bow and a quiver too, the other two bow and quiver sets I handed to one of the scouts. We should gather the scouts and think about headed back to camp We had been here a while now, the packs had been filled with food and other supplies. As you had said earlier The smell of blood could draw any wild beast here and I for one did not want to outstay my welcome so to speak.

looked over the paper quickly trying to make sense of the words.” I was from Hulneth.” I said with a whisper pausing and looking it over once more “I can not make heads or tails of this. Maybe Shayne will know more about the beast and agents?” I was somewhat confused as the words almost seemed foreign to me “If he will not survive the journey back to the lair, we should put him out of his misery. Also we should leave a few scouts behind when we leave. This place should be torched” I nodded over to one of the scouts alerting her that we would be taking out leave.

Figure the fire should put the man out of his misery as well. Save our arrows for something more worthy. nodding once more as the trackers bring the items from the camp to the Lair and then I make my way to the south I think we should leave a different way than we returned now. This way the beasts or anything will think we were just passing through. Then when we get to 200 yards find a palm frond and then cover our tracks as we move to the east.

On the way back to the fire I took another bota of water. Placing the ingredients in the unused pot I took my seat again, mixing the Meat and water one last time before pushing it off to one side and out of the way for now. Leave the rest of the supplies, I will cook enough for all I called out as I too noticed the scouts taking some food. I was not being greedy simply hoping the supplies would last. Turning my gaze to you "This will definitely be better then a plain animal, This will warm your insides and taste delicious" I said with a confident wink, taking one of the wooden bowls I began to finely chop the garlic using up the full head, then moving on and filling the second bowl with the sliced mushrooms and onions, peeling the suls I would chop them up roughly pushing them off to one side once they was finished. I added a pinch of salt and the full bota of water to the larger empty pot the moved closer to the fire again placing the pot on the flames I would wait for the Salt water to boil.

One man was in his tent clutching his insides, and upon further review of the body, I noticed some of the same scratches on the man that I had seen on the scouts the same day we had come here. possibly the beast is still about.

I then kinda slumped into my chair some, letting the paper fall. She picked it up, reading it and shaking her head in disbelief and then shot me a look and then just kinda stumbled off the dais. She then stormed off towards her hut and I closed my eyes lightly.. murmuring softly. "Her companion.. is still alive.. that is his writing, and a phrase he uses. He.. is an agent of the Kurii ." I can understand why it is that such women hate men, but it is less clear to me why they hold such enmity to women. Indeed, they accord more respect to men, who hunt them, and whom they hunt, as worthy foes, than they do to women other than themselves. They regard, it seems, all women, slave or free, as soft, worthless creatures, so unlike themselves. Perhaps most of all they despise beautiful female slaves.

Ost poison could affect even the lumbering beasts that were the Kurii. I had half a mind to start collecting the tiny snakes to milk their poison for the band. In fact.. yes that would be a thing. I heard a tap on my door, and opening it, I listened as a scout told me some women had been spotted entering the cave network. I can understand why it is that such women hate men, but it is less clear to me why they hold such enmity to women. Indeed, they accord more respect to men, who hunt them, and whom they hunt, as worthy foes, than they do to women other than themselves. They regard, it seems, all women, slave or free, as soft, worthless creatures, so unlike themselves. Perhaps most of all they despise beautiful female slaves.

says to ALL: She is rather confused by the whole confrontation as thus far, it has been the least confrontational confrontation she has ever had upon entering a lair. Usually run ins with panthers had resulted in fighting and waking up later, bound and with a massive headache and more than likely bleeding from somewhere. Her eyes move between those present, aware of the scouts who had come from the cave opening, still ready to kick the fire out should she need to. Her eyes would do well enough as she was staring into the dark where the strangers were approaching, they were staring into the fire lit cave. She remained quiet though contemplating the one who had come forward with empty hands.

And she knew them in the dark. But she elected to go quietly for it was far easier than waking up with a headache...

says to Renata Huntress Silent S: Following blindly, her mind clears and moves forward. The woman had named the Silent Sleen Band. She searched her memory for the name and could find it nowhere. Either Agnes and the Larl had never trailed this far North or they had simply never mentioned contact. The women - Renata - had mentioned that the leader was indisposed. By the number of scouts she had viewed and heard, she gleaned that this Band seemed rather sizeable and her claim that the entire cave system was theirs hinted at longevity. All this was good... as long as they didn't label her as an enemy Band member and burn her as a spy. Though the thought was a bit grim, it would at least be a warm ending.

says to ALL: My gaze drifted off as the licking flames of the fire danced to their own silent song, my mind tracing back to the life I once knew KNOCK KNOCK KNOCK. I pulled on the light pink dress adjusting it here and there "The guests have arrived Aylee. Talbot called out from the other side of the door"Tell Father I'll be down in a minute.... I....Just....have ... to" Finally a large puff of air rushed through my lips and my hands fell to my sides "Get this damned thing fastened" I could hear Talbot's footsteps walking away from the door and with that I picked up a few hair pins my hands raising once more pulling dark locks over my left shoulder and pinning silky hair in place. I left my room then and headed down the hallway and into the main hall, I walked over to the end of the long table and took a seat next to my father...

I know I had ordered a couple of Panthers to light a couple of arrows with fire and then prepare to launch at the Kur, but he had departed. I found the departure odd, but what was even odder was his words to Shayne and Rina. What could they mean?*

I can understand why it is that such women hate men, but it is less clear to me why they hold such enmity to women. Indeed, they accord more respect to men, who hunt them, and whom they hunt, as worthy foes, than they do to women other than themselves. They regard, it seems, all women, slave or free, as soft, worthless creatures, so unlike themselves. Perhaps most of all they despise beautiful female slaves.

My gaze rose down the table as a silent greeting was offered to each of my fathers guests. My brother sat opposite my seat so my gaze found him last. Everyone fell silent as my farther rose to his feet, he was a large man, one of the north he stood 6'6 and weighed a massive 370lbs, every inch of his flesh bore toned muscles, his washboard stomach as hard as stone, His voice came in a deep gruff tone that echoed throughout the hall, every eye in the room was now upon him... "Tal One and all! Welcome to my Hall where you may share with me, my fire, my salt, and my bread.. In Honour of Hulneth, I just want to say—" Just at the moment the hall door Slammed open, one of my fathers guards scurried into the room... "Wulfric....." he cried out through lack of breath every ones attention was now upon him. "The raiders..... They are here! My fathers face rapidly changed in a flush of rabid anger "They are already on the isle, They're slaughtering the villagers right now! We need to form the shield wall and push them back or they'll overrun this any moment!" My father moved off towards a chest and everyone in the room started to flail around panic."Emerus, take Aylee and the others women to the tower and lock the door, Let no one near them... Talbot, Crixus and Agron you are with me, Everyone else begin pushing the raiders back. my father called out as he bent down tossing the lid of the chest open and pulling out a large two handed double edged axe..."Father...Please.... I can help, Do not lock me in the tower, we need every able body we can get..." I ran over to my father my right hand pulling at the sleeve of his tunic.

With that my father drifted out of sight and Emerus began to carry me off towards the tower, He knew If he let go of me I would take my chances and run like I had before, But it seemed this time he would not loosen his grip. It was not long before we arrived at the tower and all the women began flooded into the room, once everyone was in Emerus closed the door and placed me back upon the floor, He pulled a key from his tunic and slotted it into the door and with a smooth twist we was now locked in the tower...."I need to find my father and Talbot... You have to let me out of here!" My voice came unsteady but remained firm and my crystal blue gaze fell upon Emerus's face as he spoke "I will not betray Your fathers orders Aylee. I am sorry but are staying put until this is over" My hands came up and clenched fists lashed out at the stone wall My actions soon stopped as one of the women spoke of the Raiders having the advantage. I rushed towards a stool , climbing on top of it as my gaze fell out of the window to the ground below. It looked like a full on war from up here the raiders seemed to be endless and bodies began falling everywhere. I could hear the loud battle-cry of war, it was as if the loud roar had come from one of the women, Then to my gaze followed a flying arrow Its shot true, slamming right into the spine of a man, sending him hurtling forwards only to meet his end as he crashed down against the floor....It was Eric, my childhood friend and at that moment an involuntary gasp left my lips. Then my gaze caught sight of my father....

But he never fell instead the hit seemed to have made him angry as he then charged towards the one who had thrown the spear. He charged forward with his shoulder his 370lb frame crashing into any in his path as he shoulder barged them out of his way. His hands now raising that two handed axe above his head slamming its full force down onto the thrower, My stomach churned as the double edged axe Popped the raiders head like a grape. My father quickly raised the axe again swinging it aimlessly at the raiders that had now began to surround him, He took out a few more of the raiders but then was struck once more One of the raiders sliced at the back of my fathers leg A roar of pain could be heard as my father fell to his knee his axe falling from his grasp as he hit the floor. The raider laughed wildly at my father as he reached out in attempts to take back the axe.... But his fingers fell short.

A nice blade a dozen or so hort long could be useful in any number of ways, whether to skin a kill or ward off an attacker. She found such a blade, a nice fine sleen blade and she picked it up, checking the weight and balance. It reminded her that she should make herself a new pair of sleen claw gloves too if given the opportunity and if it were allowed. She hated how much she had lost by being taken to the city. Truth was, if Renata had not come over when she had, That sleen knife at my hip would no doubt be pressed against your throat by now. For now I said nothing more and Let Renata take over for now. My gaze would never leave you though It would constantly remain upon you.

Renata: "I am unsure as of yet" I said thinking some lifting my left arm and settled it upon my hip "I do know the only Freedom he will gain from me is death." There was plenty of ways we could get the truth out of him... freedom not being one of them.

She made trips back and forth to the kitchen hut as she continued to work on skinning the animals brought in. Some of the meat would be cooked up over the next day or two and some of it would be cut into thin strips for drying. The fat she tossed into a second kettle to cook down to lard, a necessary ingredient in pemmican and, added to salt, was what would be used to cure the skins she was working on. Finally the stew was done, at least the meat was cooked and the suls were soft, and she returned from the kitchen hut with a stack of wooden bowls and spoons and set them near the cook fire. She ladled up a bowl for you and made her way to where you sat, bowl in one hand and spoon in the other. She sank naturally down to her knees before you and offered up the bowl. I hope that this is found to be satisfactory, Mistress.

says to ALL: She sets about cleaning up all of the bowls, going to the stream and filling a wash bowl with water and then returning to the kitchen hut. She quickly washes and rinses all of the bowls and spoons and then returns to the fire to gather the pot and eat what is left. She fills her own bowl with the remains of the stew, which is not a lot but it will be enough. Before she eats, she takes the pot into the kitchen to fill with water so that it will not be hard to clean when it cools. Then she sits by the fire to eat. Enjoying the quiet of the lair.

I can understand why it is that such women hate men, but it is less clear to me why they hold such enmity to women. Indeed, they accord more respect to men, who hunt them, and whom they hunt, as worthy foes, than they do to women other than themselves. They regard, it seems, all women, slave or free, as soft, worthless creatures, so unlike themselves. Perhaps most of all they despise beautiful female slaves.

Then in the blink of an eye before any would noticed, I was snatched upwards...One of the traps sent me shooting upward, my right foot caught in rope as I swung upside down from the roof of the caves. The arrows at my right hip scattering on the floor with a loud crash. "Well this trap works fine!" I said with a snarl.

Might be good to use in place of one of those destroyed traps.

I can understand why it is that such women hate men, but it is less clear to me why they hold such enmity to women. Indeed, they accord more respect to men, who hunt them, and whom they hunt, as worthy foes, than they do to women other than themselves. They regard, it seems, all women, slave or free, as soft, worthless creatures, so unlike themselves. Perhaps most of all they despise beautiful female slaves.

I can understand why it is that such women hate men, but it is less clear to me why they hold such enmity to women. Indeed, they accord more respect to men, who hunt them, and whom they hunt, as worthy foes, than they do to women other than themselves. They regard, it seems, all women, slave or free, as soft, worthless creatures, so unlike themselves. Perhaps most of all they despise beautiful female slaves.

says to ALL: Aye Mistresses. She moves across the lair, bare feet moving over the frozen ground in quick efficient steps, walking on the balls of her feet, with one foot falling directly before the other, making her hips sway. She ducks into the kitchen hut and returns with two botas of paga, they are cold, it is cold outside. Paga can be served either warm or cold. She returns and kneels between the two of you, handing over a bota to each. Cold paga. May it hit the spot.

hearing you and then nodding, crouching by the fire as I do Yes we shall have to do that again in the future as I see mischief approaching with two botas of paga.

MISCHIEF: nodding to you as you approach and then placing my spear down to my right. I then take up the bota and grin with a wink thank you mischief. This should hit the spot. you do the Lair proud.

I can understand why it is that such women hate men, but it is less clear to me why they hold such enmity to women. Indeed, they accord more respect to men, who hunt them, and whom they hunt, as worthy foes, than they do to women other than themselves. They regard, it seems, all women, slave or free, as soft, worthless creatures, so unlike themselves. Perhaps most of all they despise beautiful female slaves.

says to -mischief::-: Heart of a: A warm smile crossed pink lips as you held out the Paga, taking it from your grasp and lifting it to my lips taking down a quick shot of the cool liquid, My face scrunched up some as the liquid hit the back of my throat and a small cough escaped my lips. It tasted like crap and and a harsh after taste, but I rather liked that, it was an odd sensation. ”Thank you slave. You may continue with what you was doing, If Renata does not wish you that is. My eyes clawing over your frame before they drew back to Ren.

Renata: I lifted the bota up to you some ”May there be many more together” I said cheerfully before lowering the bota and taking another mouthful.
