1. THREAD- Textron, Bell, and Strzok: Recently, many have been alerted to the CRAZY connections that Peter Strzok and family have to Iran. I wanted to dig on this myself, and this thread will expose a MAJOR connection that hasn't been spoken about anywhere yet. READ ON.

2. Let's first start by going over some of what has already been reported, and what I found while also doing the research to confirm it. We will start with a BigLeaguePolitics article, that seems to have been repurposed a few different times. bigleaguepolitics.com/bombshell-pete...

3. The article purports that Strzok was CIA and FBI at the same time, and uses documents that appear to have come from the FOIA case of Jason Leopold of BuzzFeed. It looks like BLP took the story from Intellihub, who took it from a site called "Brassballs.blog"

4. I originally had a hard time with this letter, and was about to throw it into the "unverified" pile, when I was able to fig out the link to the original source. I checked the press release, the wording, etc, and it APPEARS that the article is correct.

5. There is a position that is both CIA/FBI. Read here: cia.gov/news-informati...

The CIA and FBI have implemented a number of reforms and new procedures at the CIA that are designed to detect the slightest of early warning signs of espionage. As a direct result of these reforms, anomalies were detected that ultimately led to the identification of Nicholson and his alleged espionage activities. These reforms include:

- The Chief of CIA's Counterespionage Group is a senior FBI official who has full access to CIA's most sensitive counterintelligence data and is thus in a position to fully coordinate the joint efforts of both organizations.
 - The Chief of CIA's Counterespionage Group is assisted by deputies from both the security and operational disciplines at CIA and has at least one FBI Special Agent on the Counterespionage Group staff full-time.
 - Section 811 of the Fiscal Year 1995 Intelligence Authorization Act requires immediate notification to the FBI whenever there are indications that classified information may have been disclosed without authorization to a foreign power.
 - The position of Associate Deputy Director of Operations/Counterintelligence was created to ensure high-level focus on the Agency's counterintelligence and counterespionage effort. The Associate Deputy Director of Operations/Counterintelligence's duties include full-time coordination with the FBI, currently including weekly meetings with senior FBI officials in the FBI's National Security Division.
 - New training initiatives to enhance and improve counterespionage efforts have been undertaken.

6. Here is the letter referenced in the article. The only sticking point for me is that it's on FBI letterhead, and since it appears this position was created by the CIA, I have a hard time with the fact the letter was written via the FBI using Strzok supposed title from the CIA

7. One other claim being made about Strzok is that his uncle is "Mark Strzok" who is connected to the Cartwright family. Cartwright was pardoned by Obama a few days before he left office for lying to investigators.

(As an aside, what will they do if Trump were to pardon Flynn for the same thing?)

8. However, thanks to the hard work of @The_War_Economy - we are able to pretty reliably demonstrate that they are NOT related. I know there are few "Strzok's" roaming around, but this thread is great evidence-

James Cartwright's other family members include David B. Rowland, Christopher Rowland, Jayme E. Cartwright / Rowland, Barry E. Bennett, Billee Cartwright, Sandra K. Cartwright, Andrew S. Bennett and Billie A. Bennett.

No Strzok. <https://t.co/2t2YUAE5F9> pic.twitter.com/SvnKI3R2qt

— The_War_Economy (@The_War_Economy) July 10, 2018

9. So, I didn't focus on Cartwright, I didn't make any assumptions about uranium, or Brennan, and I have done a few days of investigative work with HARD sourcing to show you what Strzok was doing in Iran, at least what is documented. READY??!

10. This "Heavy" article is actually really well done. There is very little available on Strzok Sr., or Jr. and this article did a great job of pulling together old newspaper clippings etc. Here is the link: heavy.com/news/2018/07/p...

11. Here is what stuck out to ME. Bells ringing off everywhere: HE WORKED FOR BELL HELICOPTER. After two tours in Iran as military and supposedly 7 mo as a civilian, he wants to go back. But he worked for BELL HELICOPTER.

In 1979, the Eau Claire, Wisconsin Leader-Telegram ran an article that discussed Peter Strzok, the dad. It said that Strzok, the dad, had just left Iran that February. The newspaper said that the dad "hopes the government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini will stabilize the country."

The article noted: "Strzok's wife and eight-year-old son, Peter, returned to the U.S. Jan. 6." His wife, the agent's mother, Virginia, was a teacher at the American school in Tehran and Peter Strzok, the father, "was working for a firm which sold and serviced 2,000 helicopters for the Iranian government."

It quoted the elder Strzok as saying, "I'd like very much to go back to Iran," and it adds that Strzok spent "two terms of military service and seven months as a civilian in the country."

12. Bell Helicopter is a subsidiary of Textron. I couldn't even BELIEVE the things I began to find when I dug here. Let's first look at the history of Textron. We will go to their "About" page and take a look at what THEY have to say about the 70's.
textron.com/About/Company/...

1970s: Survival Amid a Financial Crisis

The post-World War II economic boom came to a crashing halt during a decade marked by an oil crisis, a stock market crash and the demise of Richard Nixon's presidency. Yet, amid this turmoil, while many conglomerates struggled to maintain positive cash flow, Textron persevered by winning new customers in the aerospace industry and by never wavering from its acquisition strategy.

Bell Helicopter, which relied on the U.S. government for 85 percent of its sales in the '60s, developed a broader customer base and enjoyed a surge in profits as a result. By 1975, its sales were evenly divided among three sectors: commercial (both domestic and international), U.S. military and foreign government.

With its solid footing in the aerospace industry providing financial stability, Textron grew again with the purchase of Jacobsen in 1978. Still a part of Textron today, Jacobsen produces the world's broadest lines of professional turf maintenance equipment and lawn care machinery.

As the decade drew to a close, Textron experienced changes in leadership. Miller's tenure ended in 1977 when President Jimmy Carter nominated him to be chairman of the Federal Reserve. Joseph Collinson succeeded him and led the company until he retired in 1979 when Robert Straetz was named chairman and CEO. He and President Beverly Dolan would lead Textron into the reviving economy of the '80s.

13. Oh, they had a financial crisis in the 70's, but they also had a HOST of other problems. Let's dig. The SEC was investigating Textron in 1978 while Strzok Senior "worked" there. They were investigating payments made to Iran. wikileaks.org/plusd/cables/1...

16. It is very odd to me that Carter would pick this time (1977) to nominate the Chairman of the Board of Textron to be Fed Chair, given the MYRIAD of problems and shady dealings the company had at the time. The possible reason may become clear soon: presidency.ucsb.edu/ws/index.php?p...

Federal Reserve System Remarks Announcing the Nomination of G. William Miller To Be Chairman of the Board of Governors.

THE PRESIDENT. Good afternoon, everybody.

I'm very proud to announce that G. William Miller will be my nominee as Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

For the last 8 years, through two terms as Chairman, Dr. Arthur Burns has done an outstanding job of directing the Federal Reserve System. He has symbolized the integrity of our monetary system and the independence of the Federal Reserve. He has defended the strength of the dollar at home and abroad. In this and in every other public position which he has held, he has served the people of our country well and has earned our respect and our gratitude. And I am very thankful that he has also become my close, personal friend.

There are few positions more demanding than the chairmanship of the Federal Reserve, and few appointments that any President makes that have a greater influence on our country. Apart from the President himself, no one else plays a larger part in determining our Nation's economic policy.

I believe that an independent Federal Reserve must be led by a person of strong character, broad experience, and firsthand knowledge of how to cope effectively with our Nation's economic problems. That is why Dr. Burns has served his two terms so well and that is also why I have now chosen Bill Miller to be the new Chairman.

Extensive consultations with a wide range of business and financial leaders have convinced me that Bill Miller enjoys the highest respect and the confidence of everyone who knows him. His record as a businessman has won him a position of leadership in the American business community. In 1960, at the age of 35, he became president of Textron, Inc., and later became chief executive officer and chairman of the board. He is also chairman of the Conference Board, which represents top American business leadership as a business and an economic research group. Bill Miller has extensive experience and knowledge in international business and finance. He's familiar with the workings of the Federal Reserve System, having served under Dr. Burns as a Director of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston for 7 years.

I'm particularly impressed that his success as a businessman has not kept him from consistent public service. As chairman of the National Alliance of Businessmen, he has helped to find new ways to harness the resources of the business community to meet some of our most pressing public problems, especially the need to create new jobs. It was because I recognized the importance of this appointment that I consulted widely before making it and because I value the continuity of Federal monetary and economic policy.

17. A brief aside: I found an interesting cable while researching that references the Ambassador to Yugoslavia, Egelburger, wanting to meet with some traveling execs of Textron. He went on to be one of the only Foreign Service Employees to ever be a Secretary of State. (cont)

18. Ok- Back to Textron/Bell: The State Department had several "monthly" reports that were done by different embassies in different countries, and quite a few from MX. This one references "Narcotics, Bell Helicopter Textron Monthly Report for July 1977:

19. There are several like this. I am not a betting woman, but if I didn't know any better I would think that somehow Bell Helicopter was involved in some sort of illicit drug trade or something. (cont)

(cont) An assumption, but what agency do we know who has a penchant for doing things like this? You answer below :).

20. It wasn't only Iran that Bell and Textron were selling to- in 1975 they made a rather large sale to Saudi Arabia: wikileaks.org/plusd/cables/1...

21. Wow. In 1978, Bell Textron (where Peter Strzoks father "worked") was accused of bribing UAE military officials. The agent who did this was BLACKLISTED from the UAE, and came to the US State Dept for help. This was one of MANY instances of bribery and kickbacks.

22. What really started to confuse me, was that it appeared that the DOJ and the USG were ALSO looking to hold Textron/Bell accountable for illicit payments. For ex: this cable is in RE to the DR, who was prosecuting them at the time: wikileaks.org/plusd/cables/1...

23. I started digging a little deeper, and stumbled upon an old article in the NYTimes. This wasn't a good company. Very "black". Here is our first hard CIA connect.

nytimes.com/1978/05/09/arc...

24. While Miller was sitting for confirmation hearings, this came up. It is in regards to bribes with high level military members in Ghana. The “agent” company negotiating the sales had CIA ties. Here we go!

Bribe Data Destroyed After Miller Was Questioned, Textron Reports

MAY 9, 1978

WASHINGTON, May 8—Textron Inc. said today that evidence showing a company unit had made a $300,000 payment to sell helicopters in Ghana was destroyed the day after G. William Miller was asked about the transaction at his Senate hearings to be Federal Reserve chairman.

By The Associated Press

Textron, the parent corporation of Bell Helicopter, made the disclosure in a document filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Mr. Miller is former chairman of Textron.

Textron's S.E.C. filing said there is “no indication” that Textron officers,

The New York Times reported in February, that according to informed sources, Tropical was a subsidiary of Africair Inc., a company that has done business with the Central Intelligence , Agency. A part owner and vice president of Africair is Marvin L. Evans, who managed a C.I.A. investment company until he retired from the agency in 1973. Banking committee staff aides were attempting to learn whether Bell officials were aware of their sales agent's connection with the C.I.A. when the staff investigation was terminated by a majority vote within the committee to proceed with Mr. Miller's confirmation.]

25. Also during the confirmation hearings, another scandal came up- involving Iran. The Senate was inquiring about “off the books” transactions going down there WHILE Strzok Sr. was “employed” by Bell Heli. Wikileaks contains cables of people they questioned.

26. One of those people was Roger C. Brewin wikileaks.org/plusd/cables/1...

SUBMITTED HEREWITH ARE RESPONSES BY ROGER C. BREWIN TO TWELVE QUESTIONS GIVEN IN REFTEL. BREWIN'S ANSWERS ARE KEYED TO QUESTIONS. SIGNED WRITTEN RESPONSES TO QUESTIONS WILL BE POUCHED TO NEA/RA.

1. SUBSEQUENT TO MY ARRIVAL AT THIS POST IN AUGUST 1974 I HEARD FROM VARIOUS INDIVIDUALS IN THE TEHRAN BUSINESS COMMUNITY, WHOSE NAMES I AM UNABLE TO RECALL, THAT GENERAL MOHAMMED KHATAMI, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE IMPERIAL IRANIAN AIR FORCE, HAD A FINANCIAL INTEREST IN BOTH STP (SKERKAT SHAHAMI TAYAR PARS) AND AIR TAXI, IRANIAN COMPANIES. THIS FINANCIA INTEREST WAS VARIOUSLY DESCRIBED AS SILENT PARTNERSHIP, MINORITY INTEREST, AND PART OWNERSHIP. I WAS ALSO TOLD THAT GENERAL KHATAMI MAY HAVE SOLD HIS INTEREST IN EITHER OF THESE COMPANIES SOMETIME IN THE EARLY 1970'S.

2. AS STATED ABOVE, I HAD HEARD THAT GENERAL KHATAMI UNCLASSIFIED

A tentative schedule drawn up by the program committee of the Group indicates free dates for December 3 and December 17. However, any date after December 3 would be quite agreeable to the Group. 28. Now, to be clear, this letter was written in 1953, and the 70s were a few decades later, however, there are some other similarities with Strzok and Brewin. I stumbled across an interview done with him in 1990 by a graduate student. He speaks in detail about his time in Iran.

29. When?! The 70's, of course! Right up through '78. In this interview (linked) he talks specifically about Bell helicopter in Iran. When he left, he refocused his efforts on Agriculture in foreign countries. Keep this in your pocket. adst.org/OH%20TOCs/Brew... (page 16)

Q: Then you were sent to Tehran as Economic Counselor. How did you manage to get this assignment, after Asuncion and La Paz?

BREWIN: I was called by Personnel while in Bolivia as my tour was coming to an end and was asked whether I wanted to go to Iran. I asked whether I could get back the following day. They said ok, but no later than that. I discussed it with my wife who was ecstatic about the idea of going back to the Middle East, where she had served before we were married. So I agreed.

Q: You were there from 1974 to 1978, which was a very interesting period. Can you describe the situation in 1974 when you arrived in Tehran.

BREWIN: When I got there, the recycling of the petrodollar had begun with a real vengeance. The oil price increases of the early '70s were just beginning to bring in the bountiful receipts. The country was knee-deep in Western businessmen looking for a piece of the action. It seemed to herald an era of $22 billion of expenditures per year, every year as far as one could foresee in the future. There might have been ups and downs in the revenues and problems here and there--including problems of absorbing all the imports--but it seemed like good times would never stop.

BREWIN: The Embassy's point of view was that what the Shah asked for, he got, with very few exceptions--some very high tech items which in some cases hadn't even been released to US forces. The "Nixon doctrine" governed. We viewed the Shah as the keeper of peace in the Gulf area. He was the bulwark of stability in the area. If he wanted to buy stuff from us, that was fine; we were happy to sell it.

Q: That was our policy. How was it viewed internally in the Embassy? Was there concern?

BREWIN: There were occasional manifestations of concern, but they never really percolated up to the Ambassador or in field reports. The concerns that we received were from the Congress about why a certain weapon system was being sold and why it had to be so sophisticated (e.g. the Airborne Warning System (AWACS)). The role of the Embassy and particularly the Ambassador was to interpret the role of Iran to the Congressmen. He had to point out the Shah's real needs.

Q: Did you have trouble with Congress? We had a policy which was being challenged outside the Administration. Did for example the economic section question whether Iran should be spending these huge amounts on military hardware when there were developmental needs elsewhere?

BREWIN: No; that was never a problem for my section. One of the givens in the economic section that we had to work with was that there would be significant amounts spent for military hardware and whether we rationalized it to ourselves or were looking for a pretext, I don't know, but we said--and DoD said this--there would spin-offs from these weapon purchases in turn of economic development--for example, co-production. We thought that eventually aircraft would be manufactured in Iran. Motor vehicles would be built in Iran in greater numbers. These were all spin-offs from weapon sales. I don't think our policy caused my section any great problems. We were kept busy enough with the purely commercial, non-military business.

BREWIN: Not really serious ones while I was there. Bell helicopter, primarily based in Isfahan, had a reputation, not really deserved, for having a bunch of rowdies--Americans perfectly capable of driving a motorcycle through a mosque half naked or giving offense to the Iranians in a variety of ways. Most of these stories were apocryphal. Most Americans were put on their good behavior by their employers back in the US and most were aware that Iran was a different place by far from any place they had ever been, including the Arab world. They knew that there were sensitivities. There were exceptions from time to time, but the potential problem which some of us foresaw was the issue of Americans being held hostage in a time when the Shah might become less secure on his throne. What would we do with thirty two thousand Americans if the Shah were to go down the tube?

Q: So there was concern that the Shah might not be there forever?

BREWIN: Yes. The concern was not that one could foresee the Shah's overthrow in a coup d'etat, but when after many years he would pass from the scene by death or some incapacity. Could then the new Shah tame what might be pressures on the society? Then what happens to the Americans if there were riots in the streets or disturbances of the kind that occurred under Mossadegh?

Q: So we looked back to the Mossadegh period as a potential model for the future?

BREWIN: Yes; something to be avoided at all costs.

Q: So the large American civilian presence was a major concern?

BREWIN: It was a major concern. I was active in the US-Iran Chamber of Commerce--I was an office-holder for the period I was there--provided monthly forums for the Americans to meet. There were reasonable amounts of social outlets for the Americans--far, far more than there were in Saudi Arabia, for example. There were possibilities of interesting travel within Iran. So I never found the American community to be a difficult one to work with either in the business sense or to live with in the social sense.

Q: How were your dealings with the Iranian officials?

BREWIN: We came to understand more and more as time went on that, as Ambassador Richard Helms put it in one of his telegrams to Kissinger, Iranians had by now wanted to be treated as equal partners when they sat at the table with us. No more crumbs. This was the prevailing official attitude. The Iranians I dealt with were usually charming and very hospitable. When they said "No", they often found ways to do so in a charming and friendly manner, but it was quite clear that there was an element of nationalism present in the Iranian make up and in the Shah's government which went from top to bottom. One

Q: You returned to the Department in 1978 and until 1980 you were the Director of the Agricultural Office in the Bureau for International Organizations. What were your responsibilities there?

BREWIN: We looked after our interests in international organizations dealing with food matters. All these organizations were based in Rome. We had a separate mission there called FODAG, which is now headed by an official of Ambassadorial rank--that wasn't true then. A small staff of Foreign Service and AID officers which represented our interests in FAO (Food and Agriculture Organization), Food for Peace, IFAD (International Fund for Agricultural Development) and an umbrella policy body--the World Food Council which met one a year. We made up the delegations for the FAO meetings, coordinated with the Department of Agriculture, dealt with contentious issues in the FAO of which there were a few. It was not the best of times nor the worst of times for US relations with these bodies. It got much worse later particularly in terms of budgets. The then and now Director General of FAO was not the easiest person to deal with; he tended to run the organization as a private fiefdom, which annoyed us. He could be unresponsive occasionally on political issues. The budget was always a problem for us:

30. PS: He is also found in this secret book passed around foreign governments as a "Whose Who?" in the CIA: scribd.com/doc/46459438/W... So he is CIA until AT LEAST '68:

Who's Who in CIA. 1968

Mader, Julius. Who's Who in CIA. Berlin: J.Mader, 1968. 605 pages.

Published in East Germany, under Stasi auspices and probably with KGB assistance, this little (4 by 5.5 inches) book is nearly impossible to find. It even has a habit of disappearing from U.S. libraries. Each of the nearly 2500 entries has a birth date and several short lines of career information.

Mader paints with a broad brush. He admits in his introduction -- if not in his title -- that his listings include former OSS, military intelligence (even during WW2), State Department personnel who have done "work for CIA," FBI counterintelligence, and also the occasional politician who sat on this or that intelligence committee. Generally when Mader includes a name, it's merely an indication that Mader found this person interesting for one reason or another, and further research and corroboration is needed before any conclusions can be drawn. Some of his names, for example, appear to have been compiled by looking for the word "intelligence" in the State Department Biographic Register.

At the same time, Mader apparently had access to some information on CIA officers that was not publicly available. More than once a "new" CIA name has surfaced in Western media that had been sitting in Mader's book all along. For the occasional investigator who is too experienced to expect easy answers, this book continues to be quite useful. -- D.Brandt

31. Why do I talk about the Agriculture connection? Because Strzok Sr. ALSO moved into Agriculture when he arrived back from Iran.

A 1983 article in The Bismarck Tribune said that Peter Strzok, the father, worked with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, helping “the governments of underdeveloped nations.”

After he retired, he “began working with Catholic Relief Services, this time dealing directly with the struggling farm families in the impoverished African nation of Upper Volta,” the newspaper article reported.

After three years in Upper Volta, the elder Strzok took an assignment as director of Catholic Relief Services in Haiti. One goal: Reduce the infant mortality rate. He also worked in a food assistance program. The article stated that he was married with a then-13-year-old son. (The FBI agent Strzok is now 48.)

“He said his family has a good attitude about the lifestyle, but every now and then his son wishes for a television video game,” the newspaper reported, adding the father said his “value system changed when he moved to Upper Volta.” People “spend their time working to survive,” according to the newspaper.

In 1983, the Wisconsin State Journal also ran a story on Peter Strzok’s dad. The story says the elder Strzok served 21 years in the Army before retiring. Instead, he “moved his family to Upper Volta, an almost barren nation in Africa, where he is program director for Catholic Relief Services,” says the article.

The newspaper reported that the elder Strzok ran a program teaching farmers how to be more effective. The article said Strzok grew up on a dairy farm.

Another article in the Eau Claire Leader-Telegram in 1981 quoted the father as saying the Upper Volta area of Africa was “very primitive” and “rough.” It said that he ran a $25 million program.

“He and his wife and son have lived in Africa for three years,” said the article.

32. So far we have quite a few coincidences. Peter Strzok Sr. worked in Iran, right before the fall of the Shah, with a military contractor (Foreign and US) who had connections to the CIA...

33. Then he left, and went into the same "industry" as a documented CIA agent who had also been there during that time period, and testified on behalf of the chairman of the company. Sounds legit.

34. Here is some proof of Strzok Sr. experience in Iran and with military aircraft, etc. He was an Army Engineer Captain in 65 and worked with Bell as late as 1978:

35. Here is an old WaPo article about the Bell plant in Iran, that doesn't name who it quotes in the article, but speaks to the large presence that Bell/Textron.

The Shah's Americans

By Richard T. Sale, Special to The Washington Post; The writer, a former reporter for Life magazine and recently spent more than a month touring Iran. Ma
May 12, 1977

The Bell Helicopter complex is at Isfahan, its modern office hidden deep in the city in an unmarked cement building close by the local Pepsi plant. The Bell people were not happy to find a reporter at the door.

Are you really an American? They asked. A credential? Well, we can't talk here: Phones are tapped, there are microphones in the walls. Could we go for a drive?

In the car, the boyist brown-haired 35-year-old man was saying, "You never know. Here if you talk about something they don't like, you're out, 24 hours later, you're out - with no time to sell your household goods, your car, your other possessions. And you never know what they are going to regard as being harmful to their security? They change their minds every minute."

Suddenly his small car stopped short; we had almost collided with a jitney cab. "Can you imagine giving a constitution to this bunch of monkeys?" he asked rhetorically.

For America, Iran has become big business. Non-oil U.S.-Iranian trade rose from $400 million in 1972 to more than $2 billion in 1976, quintupled. Iranian-American arms deals have totaled $15 billion over the past six years, including expensive U.S. support-service contracts. Each year, the American presence has grown. There are now 31,000 American in Iran.

Bell, like many American defense contractors in Iran, is involved in training, maintenance and support for the Iranian military. The shah's helicopter force is second only to the U.S. inventory. He has 500 military Bell helicopters, plus another 100 Augusta Bell models.

Since Iran's shortage of skilled labor and technical management is acute and chronic, Iran has had to rely on Bell to keep the Iranian helicopter fleet flying.

Bell says its machines are of the latest military type. They need eight to 10 hours of intensive maintenance for every hour of flight. Bell's contingent is the largest American group in Iran, including the military. As of April 1975, Bell had more than 1,700 active employees there and 6,000 dependents. Those numbers increased by 8 per cent last year.

Isfahan, where the 45-acre Bell base is located, is a sizable city 457 miles from Tehran. It is said to contain more blue onion-domed mosques than any other city in Iran. To make the overseas assignment attractive, the home company offered financial enticements: tripled salaries and boosts in position. There were also tax breaks that amounted to a federal subsidy.

Bell told its people Iran was a hardship post and tried, largely in vain, to discourage families from going along. But for the normal two-year assignment, the rewards looked big, and many took the bait. A Bell personnel official described the community his company brought:

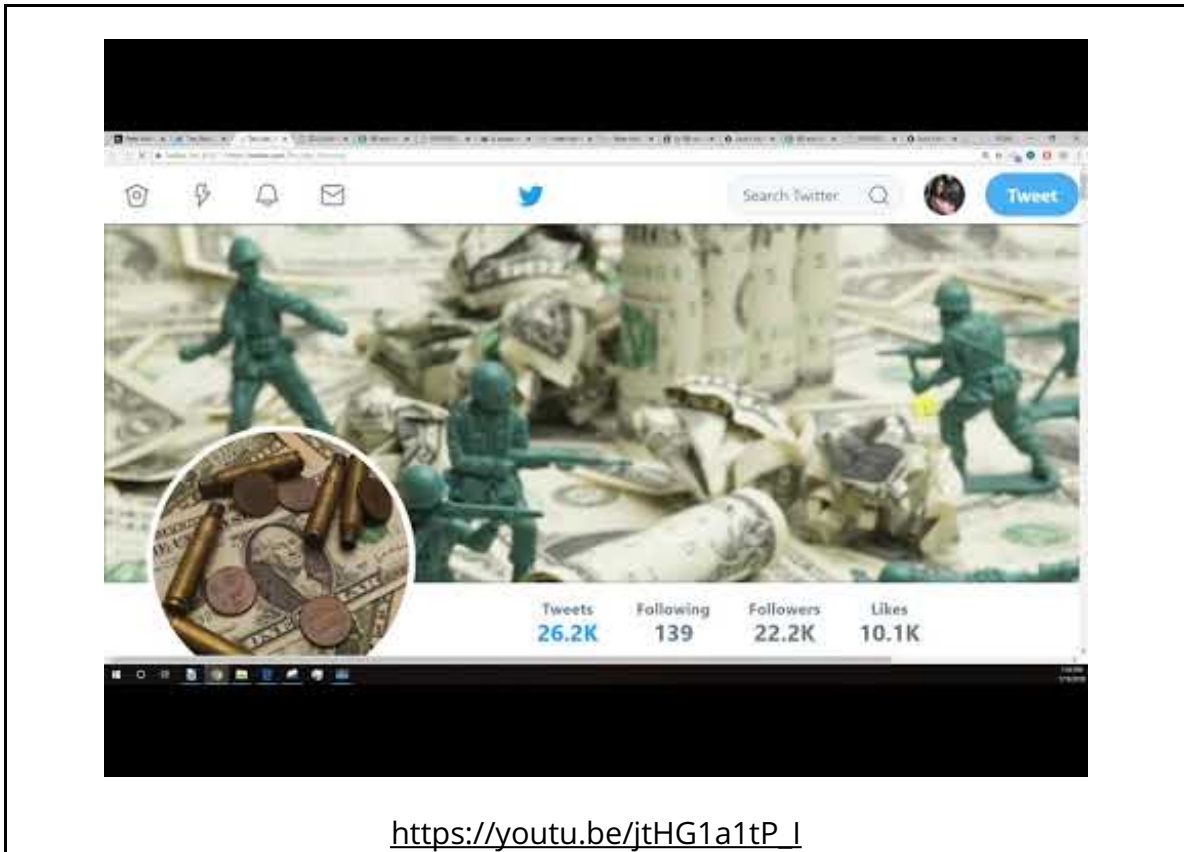

"What you have here are ex-military professionals, the guys who liked Saigon, the mid-level fellows who don't know any other way of making a living. The money's good, so they came."

36. There is really a lot more here, but I think you are getting the picture. A shady defense and military provider, to both foreign (more) and domestic needs, has Strzok working for them IN IRAN right before the fall of the Shah, while a documented high ranking CIA agent

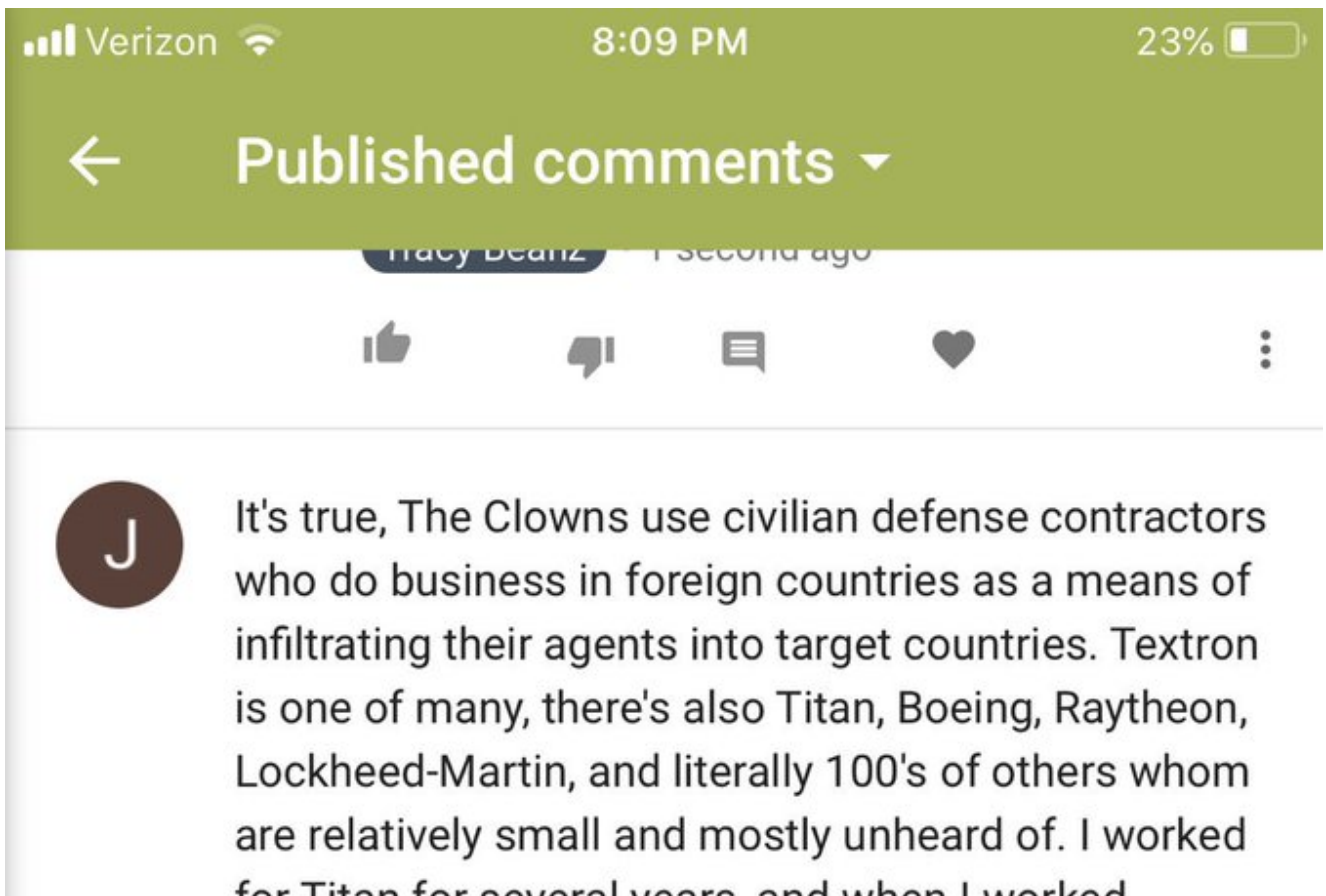

37. ...just also happens to be there, and then they both come back and go into "Food and Humanitarian" at the same time....

38. WHILE THE CHAIRMAN of the company is being investigated by Congress, who then just stops their investigation midstream, and confirms him to become Chair of the Fed. Sounds about right.

39. Please share the video I did documenting all of this along with my thread if you find this helpful.

ADDENDUM: Please read the comments on my YouTube video. There are TONS of little gems there, like this one.

for Titan for several years, and when I worked overseas, in Thailand and Indonesia, it kind of became a game for those of us on the outside of that realm to spot them. Understand this, about half of the people that work in foreign offices of any defense contractor will will have TS-SCI clearances and the other half will have secret, because your working on government sponsored defense contracts. The vast majority of those with TS-SCI clearances have no contact with the clowns at all It was easy, just spot the guys that only showed up once a month to fill out their expense reports. They also had somewhat innocuous titles like, Director, Engineering Services or VP, Field Communication. Also, for having such important sounding titles, they never had anyone working for them.

Read the ACTUAL indictment in the Veselnitskaya case, and stop letting the media spin this nonsense. Glenn Simpson worked with Veselnitskaya on the Prevezon case- very closely on the case as a whole, and the dates in the indictment go back to 2014.

Here are some of my thoughts: We know SDNY isn't doing Trump any favors. Lets just make sure we have that out there. So, the Prevezon case spoken about in the indictment was a big deal. It settled in 2017: businessinsider.com/us-v-prevezon-...

'The offer was too good to refuse': A major Russian money-laundering case was unexpectedly settled in New York

A major money-laundering case set to go to trial last week in New York was suddenly settled

I am wondering how they knew this. Were they poking around in Glenn Simpsons email, and stumble across it? I ask, because the case had already been settled. Now, over a year and a half later you are randomly charging the attorney with obstruction of justice?

Office to NATALYA VLADIMIROVNA VESELNITSKAYA, the defendant, on July 2, 2014 acknowledging receipt of the MLAT Request. A declaration submitted together with the Motion in Limine Reply included a copy of this letter and a translation.

I decided I was going to REALLY dive in to this lawsuit, and began late last night. I've got a lot more work to do, but I don't think people realize what has been put on record in this case. (cont)

So, with that in mind, and because we know the gov. spies and targets people they don't like, (especially journalists, including those telling the real story of F&F and Benghazi) I will be presenting this to you. Stay Closely tuned. This is a STUNNING story.

The passing of Bre Payton was tragic, and scary. But please - can everyone stop saying she was murdered because of an article she wrote "exposing" Mueller? It's just wrong. She wrote an article about the IG report. It's in the FIRST SENTENCE.

Here: "The Department of Justice wiped text messages between former FBI employees Lisa Page and Peter Stroz from their cell phones before the Office of the Inspector General could review them, a new report from the DOJ watchdog reveals"

She very clearly links the report - I covered it as well. It's just a shame that people aren't even doing the smallest bit of cursory research here, and are using something untrue to perpetrate some sort of conspiracy surrounding her tragic passing.

Mugabe family in school land grab

By newsday

- January 24, 2018

FORMER President Robert Mugabe's family is embroiled in a nasty fight over land in Borrowdale, which reportedly belongs to a Harare private school owned by the Reformed Church in Zimbabwe (RCZ), which former First Lady Grace Mugabe reportedly grabbed when her husband was still in power.

Eaglesvale Senior School has now renewed its fight for the large piece of land donated to it by RCZ close to 40 years ago and registered under the Eaglesvale Daisyfield Trust (EDT).

The land, measuring 23 hectares, runs from where Borrowdale Road intersects with Harare Drive to where it intersects with Crowhill Road and Helensvale shopping centre, the road that leads to Mugabe's expansive Blue Roof mansion.
